England is a Smoldering Powder Keg

In the United Kingdom one goes to jail for saying anything government deems “inflammatory speech”. The number of people arrested in Britain for what they said in social media? 3,300 (2020 data)

British Prime Minister’s office: “We’re talking about a minority of thugs who don’t speak for Britain. Anyone who stokes this violence, whether on the internet or in person, can be prosecuted and face prison.”

They cannot say the bare truth
Yet can’t take more of this abuse
When speak your mind is not OK
In good ol’ country of U.K.

Reveal what’s true and jail awaits
“These strange newcomers ain’t your mates”
Can’t have a state within a state
Islam just wants to seal your fate

To kill, to shut, to bend and rule
The Sharia for work and school
With government that’s left at core
The Brits agree to this no more

The lying press to fix the bonds
“Protest is crime”, brute response
Tyrannic force, thy ears are sealed
Police, batons, the riot shields

Folks are arrested and defamed
The powers want to keep them tamed
The murdered kids – a tragic sight
A call for action and the fight

They are the voices in the street
The “right extremists” raise the heat
Fine men and women, working class
Against invaders looney mass

Guys are so gentle with the words
Unite against the foreign hordes
The anger smolders, hell to pay
Stand strong, good people of U.K.
